DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1-38 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over White 5,339,252.

White teaches a marketing and production system for custom shoes, comprising: a receiver for receiving shoe orders, each order comprising user information and scanned foot images (see col. 3, lines 15-33 as noted herein "After electro-optical scanning of the particular customer's feet with foot scanner 100, information is transferred to a central storage facility for a particular retail footwear store 102. Subsequently, such information is electronically transferred to a centralized database 104 by way of one of several communication methods including a computerized network transfer, serial data communication, parallel data communication, and modem communication or by transferring a storage medium such as a floppy disk, magnetic tape, optical disk, punch tape, punch card, or other storage medium readable by an electronic computing means. Once the customer foot size information is in the centralized database 104, a query into an existing footwear last database 116 is checked electronically for a last which could be used to manufacture a custom fit piece of footwear for the particular customer"); a conversion utility for converting the scanned foot images into a three dimensional model (Figures 9 and 10); a modeling utility for manipulating the three dimensional model; a processing utility for generating fabrication from the manipulated model; and a fabrication device that interprets the fabrication instructions to create a physical reproduction of the shoe; wherein the physical reproduction created by the fabrication device is subsequently delivered to the user.

While White teaches all of the elements of the claimed invention, White does not teach the manufacturing of orthotic insoles. However, it would have been obvious for one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to adapt the system and method of White to manufacture custom orthotic insoles.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

...(1) Lyden 6,601,042 note the customization of footwear and retail Internet business;

...(2) Danenberg, 2003/0110095 note method of online custom shoe ordering.

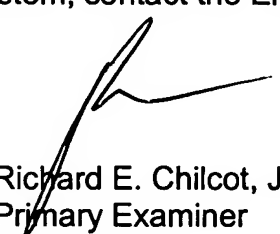

...(3) Arbogast et al., 2003/0009354, note the method of configuring and ordering medical devices.
